2019-12-29	2300	History	Soundtracks: Songs That Defined History		Space Race	01	5	On July 20, 1969 an estimated 600 million people all over the world watched astronauts Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin set foot on the moon for the first time. The moonwalk inspired musicians from David Bowie and the Byrds to Parliament-Funkadelic and Sun Ra to imagine a cosmic future for mankind. However, once the Cold War space race had been won, popular interest in space exploration waned rapidly – as reflected in songs by Elton John and Gil Scott-Heron. In December 1972, NASA launched its final manned mission to the moon, and we have never gone back since. Almost half a century after the moon landing, while our deep yearning to explore the universe lives on in the realm of art and music, its most profound legacy may be the perspective it gave us on our own planet and who we are as a species. Railways created the great cities, gave Britain its National Health Service and the Football League, helped win wars and emancipated women. In the 1820s, a funny looking machine was pulling coal five miles along a primitive track between a mine near Newcastle Mine and the river Tyne. The locomotive, Puffing Billy, changed everything. 2020-01-02	1500	Culture & Society	Railways That Built Britain		Railways That Built Britain Series 1, The Ep 2	01	2	By the 1900s the railways had changed the face of Britain. By 1913, over a million Britons were using the railways to travel to Paris and beyond. But the wonders of the new railways had a dark side. For years, military planners had been working on ways to use them for war. When that war came in 1914, they proved deadly: within days, three million German troops had boarded trains for France, while in Britain half the army did the same. By 1945, the railways once again saved the country. Effectively nationalised and run from a secret location buried deep in an old underground station, the railways organised the evacuation of over a million children from the cities, and helped bring back half the British army from the beaches and northern France. With remarkable access to Canada's busiest organ-transplant hospital, we witness one of the most profound experiences in any human life: the loss of a child, and the agonising decision this tragedy demands. Created by two acclaimed Canadian documentarians, director Niobe Thompson and producer Rovita Dransfeld, Vital Bonds grips the viewer in a relentless, emotional embrace - propelling us from moments of unexpected joy to unbearable heartbreak - until the very final frame. With the dawn of the Vatican II era, radical changes in the Church are threatening the course of nuns' lives. Cathleen finds herself struggling with issues of faith, sexuality, and the changing administration. As she progresses from the postulant to the novitiate stage of training, she finds her faith repeatedly confronted and challenged by the harsh, often inhumane realities of being a servant of God.
