The Nazis had been beaten and people all over Britain took to the streets to celebrate victory. But it's only fairly recently that we've discovered just how advanced the plans were for Britain and what we might have seen if Hitler and his armies had actually won the war. These were not just Nazi pipe-dreams - these were detailed plans and preparations many of which were already being implemented. From pre-war spying, concentration camps on British soil to national landmarks earmarked by the Nazis, in this episode we'll discover what Hitler's plans for Britain really were. 2019-03-03	2630	Culture & Society	The Eighties		Raised On Television Part One	01	1	The Eighties is a fascinating documentary series that examines the revolutionary decade of the 1980s, with extraordinary insight into a decade that had a profound impact on America, taking a look at significant events and individuals such as the Cold War, AIDS crisis, Ronald Reagan and Steve Jobs. This first episode looks at the pre-cable world with the enormous free-to-air ratings of Dallas and the finale of M.A.S.H. The sitcom is revitalised by The Cosby Show and Cheers, and Hill Street Blues and St Elsewhere changed the rules of story-telling on television. Cable TV makes new heroes out of sporting (ESPN) and the first channel focused on the youth market (MTV) launches. TV as The Confessional spawns both good and bad television. The biggest revelation was proof of technology needed to produce cloth which was never before seen in Britain and proved these villagers' lives were anything but primitive. But behind all the incredible revelations is a mystery. The village is perfectly preserved because it burned to the ground. Was it a terrible accident or a deliberate act of violence?
