2021-07-11	1635	History	Hitler's World: The Post War Plan	Nazification	01	5	Adolf Hitler had a clear idea of what he considered to be a model citizen of the Third Reich. For him, a true Nazi was much more than just a blonde haired, blue eyed Aryan of Germanic decent. A true and loyal Nazi would live and breathe the regime, incorporating it into every aspect of their lives. What they read, how they dressed, and even who they married would all be strictly controlled in order for them to confirm to his ideals. Guy takes a look at how Hitler implemented these changes through various policies and laws.	UNITED KINGDOM	English-100	2018	RPT	PG	a	Y	Y

2021-07-14	1405	History	French Voyages: Discovery To Australia	Premiere	French Voyages Of Discovery To Australia	0	0	Could Australia ever have been French? The English certainly thought so. Through revolution, empire and restoration, late 18th and early 19th century France maintained an unwavering commitment to research and discovery in the Pacific region and in Australia. More interested in science than in new colonies, these early French voyages, led by commanders like Bougainville, Lapérouse, D'Entrecasteaux, Baudin, Freycinet, Duperrey and Dumont d'Urville, were the first to name, describe and beautifully illustrate many Australian species. England may have colonised Australia, but for many years it was France that understood it best. This richly illustrated short documentary film brings to life our fascinating and colourful French history and reminds us of a time when scientific research involved intrepid voyages in tall ships on the high seas, battling scurvy and storms, insects and rats, and hostilities both on board and on shore.
